Understanding Photoshop The software features a special application called the _Photoshop Environment,_ or Photoshop for short. As you can see in Figure 2-1, the Photoshop Environment is the term used for all the items on the Photoshop workspace. These items provide the tools you need to create and edit images, including layers, channels, paths, and smart objects. Photoshop is one of the most powerful image editing programs for creating,

retouching, and manipulating images. The number of features that it offers is mind-boggling. But don't get scared off because it's truly a tool of image artists, not a novice's editing software. You can purchase Photoshop at a variety of prices (the latest version costs around $15,000), so you must decide if you need to purchase the full version of the software, which includes the layers, channels, brushes, gradients, frames, text, and smart objects. Or, you can purchase more of the features that you need for a specific project. Chapter 18 tells you more about the various features of Photoshop.

Q: HttpURLConnection disconnect I'm working on a Java program that uses an HttpURLConnection object to communicate with a server. After a few minutes of use the server is no longer reachable (i.e., it responds with an HTTP 503 error). Is there a way to determine whether or not the HttpURLConnection is still connected to the server? For the majority of my application's time, the HttpURLConnection is working fine. When a problem occurs with the connection I need to be able to log the error. A: The `HttpURLConnection` object is not designed to be re-used. What you are actually trying to do is to maintain an "open connection". Which, by the way, you don't need to do -- the `HttpURLConnection` class is thread-safe. One way you can do it is to wrap your `HttpURLConnection` instance in a class that will hold on to your connection for the life of your application -- where you can increment the count and when it reaches a predetermined number, you close the connection. A: That is a very annoying issue. What I normally do is write an appender to send the 503 to a log and also call the close method on the connection. If the 500s keep happening I will know it's a problem with the app. If you can log the 503 error, than that will help also. This is not a great solution, but it seems to work for me. Three-dimensional analysis of primary stability of a new four-bar interlocking tapered implant-abutment connection. The purpose of this study was to evaluate the primary stability of implants using a new interlocking tapered implant-abutment connection. Forty-two implants, placed in the maxilla of 24 patients in two different phases, were grouped according to macrogeometry, i.e., three platform-matching implants, 13 three-dimensional precision implants, and 16 cylindrical implants. Implant stability quotients (ISQs) were measured using the Osstell apparatus. Four variables were analyzed: 1) peri-implant bone density, 2) implant geometry, 3) implant torque, and 4) implant length. Bone densities ranged from low to normal. No significant differences in ISQ values were observed between cylindrical implants with respect to platform-matching implants ($P=0.083$). However,

MotoGP 2013: Ducati develop Dorsoduro bike for Andrea Iannone Ducati has designed a bike which will be used by Andrea Iannone next season, the firm revealed at its Valencia launch event. Iannone will be reunited with his 2014 machinery, but it will have been developed for him by Ducati in an bid to make sure he is as comfortable as possible in the Crescent Panigale. “When you work on such a brand as Ducati you obviously want to give something that is special,” Ducati test rider Loris Baz told MCN. “So I made a special bike for Andrea, we worked on the suspension and the frame and the wheelbase – we wanted the same thing as the bike that he rode this year but with a different weight distribution. “We worked on a completely different concept – it’s a completely different bike.” While Iannone’s team-mate Andrea Dovizioso has also been racing a modified 2014 design for the bulk of the season, the Sepang dominant Italian racer has been forced to race with the one developed for him by the factory in 2013. And Ducati's development of the bike for Iannone, which is expected to be unveiled at next week's Misano round, will become all the more important once the Italian has had an enforced break from racing following his second lap crash in the San Marino Grand Prix. "Now the time has come for him to get back to the bike and start riding it," Baz said. "I know he's happy with it. Obviously, at the end of the day he is the one who can assess how it feels on the bike and how to use it but he is happy with it. “It was not easy to make it lighter – we even looked at modifying the engine and the bike in order to do this. “It’s a bike that we are going to continue to work on in the winter.” To say that the past few weeks have been difficult is an understatement. At the top of the heap I would place the couple of weeks that have passed since I returned from my trip to Alabama for my high school graduation. It’s been hard to explain how one single night can turn the country’s eyes and focus on one
