In 'Micro Miners' your main character is a miner with a slingshot, just like the old classic's Slingshot Pete. In this game however you work your way up to being a mining boss! The player energy system in this game keeps you on your toes throughout the game in a way that was never done before. In this game the player has two health bars, player energy and mining energy! Your player energy is displayed with your emotes, your mining energy is displayed with coloured orbs. The orb colour will indicate how many mining orbs the player needs to collect to upgrade to the next level. Being able to change your mining orbs is quite useful for helping you not overheat your mining energy. Overheating your mining energy can lead to frustrating moments when you do get the orb energy level to upgrade you, especially if you are mining alone. It is a good idea to get well into the game and chat to other players to share mining strategies with them, their mining strategies will be invaluable to you when you get towards the end of the game. The name of this game is based on a micro-miner, the smallest kind of mining machine, that is used to extract metal ores from subterranean regions. These micro-miners are based on the idea of having just enough power to get the job done. The pets in 'Micro Miners' work like that. When you first start your journey in 'Micro Miners' you are just like that, you have just enough miner power to begin your journey to being a mining boss. You need to complete a set number of mining levels in order to unlock a pet! In 'Micro Miners' the primary currency used in the game is called credits, in other words you earn credits by mining or purchasing them from other players. Credits can be used on your pets, to upgrade your mining levels or to purchase player upgrades. Credits can also be used to purchase in game boosts such as special mining upgrades or bigger slingshots. Credits can be earned by a few different ways, by mining ores and by purchasing them in the store for real money or in-game credits. Credits can also be earned by completing special challenges, as well as by sharing your mining upgrades and posts about your mining experience on social media platforms. In 'Micro Miners' you will need to equip a certain amount of mining energy before you begin your mining session. Each level you mine will be indicated with a small mining icon and coloured mining orbs. The amount of mining

My friend Bill and I consider ourselves fairly good urban hikers on the East Coast. But even we experienced an interregnum during our long trail in Florida last year. We had just come through the Tampa Bay Area and Tom Brown Park and enjoyed some great trails there. Then south of there we got even more lucky and enjoyed some glory in the Dade State Forest in central Florida. But between Tampa and the Ocala National Forest, all we could find was a series of paved roads that were flat and were pretty easy on our feet. I'm starting to think that in fact I am worthless as a hiker. The trails I've found have all been easy trails, and not that great ones. But it was too much of a downer for Bill and I, so we figured out a way we could hike back to our lives in Virginia. We drove up to Atlanta, hiked the West Lake Trail (which is by the way great), then came through the Ocala National Forest to a place called Lake Talquin. The Talquin Lodge is kind of a spiffy kind of place that allows weekenders to use lots of their facilities. Located across the river from the city of Ocala on Lake Talquin, it was the perfect place to chill and play golf (if only Bill would let me). It's a reasonable old structure in a quiet back lake region, and for two best friends who spend all their time reading and playing golf, it was a perfect idea. With hindsight, I think we could have taken a more leisurely route in and found better territory for an itinerary like this. But what's done is done. To get into the Ocala National Forest, you have to drive down to it's northern corner, which is in the Georgia panhandle. A fairly quiet place for driving, the forest was the perfect place to take a break from the hustle and bustle of the real city (at least for two weeks). After two hours of driving from Atlanta, we arrived in Ocala. Loaded up the car.

Informed the hotel clerk we had a flight to catch first thing in the morning to address some urgent business. The next morning Bill and I got up, then gave notice to the desk clerk that, with a little luck, we were going to be getting lucky twice in one week. (if only we knew.) We had brought our on board camcorder and turned it on for the
