(If you play against the computer on the same device, the computer will be able to move stones as if they were your own stones.) "The three games ('Steel' 'Birds', and 'Scat'e) all have the same basic rules. In each of the games, a deck of 50 playing cards is placed face down in front of the board. The cards may be drawn out and they will be face up once your own stones hit the black stones. Black stones can only be moved by the user's stones. White stones can be moved by the user's, computer's or opponent's stones, and black stones can also be moved by the computer's stones. If you play on the black stones, there is a chance that the computer may cut up the white stones. It is not easy to move a black stone. We suggest you play if you can follow the ideal play style. If you make a mistake, you will lose the game." "We have been developing Crazy Stone for the past few years." Crazy Stone has the same style and basic rules as the two game : Steel Bird and Scat e. MVC em meu PC com registro no github. "Projeto model agrupador de produção" é o projeto principal, e mais no meu github temos os projetos "teste", "projeto base", "projeto de cadastro de produtos", "projeto de download de informação", "projeto de envio de emails" e "projeto de pagamento de produtos". Até aí tudo tranquilo.. Pessoal eu gostaria de desenvolver algumas aplicações semelhantes em diferentes projetos. eu já faço isso de forma manual, criando um projeto e criando o controller, model e view.. Gostaria de fazer isso e declarar o layout para minimizar o código então criar outros projetos automaticamente. Tem jeito algum de fazer isso? Eu sei que existe alguns frameworks como codefody, ninject ou outros que automatizam algumas partes, tem mesma coisa? A: Começando de zero é bem complicado adicionar uma dependência nesse tipo de projeto. Algumas ferramentas podem automatizá-lo, mas muitas das vezes é mais fácil começar de zero e combinar as ferramentas que já possuem.
