We cannot guarantee the accuracy of the measurements. Measurements in the EU contain one or more blank screen(s) under certain conditions TOSLINK Version TOSLINK is a type of transmission technology which uses a pair of mono cables instead of a coil of wire to transfer the audio signals, so there is no parasitic inductance. As the cables get longer, the longer the audio quality will be. However, the longer the cables are, the larger the size of the connection box will be. Is there any difference between TOSLINK and USB? USB is a standard interface that is commonly used in mobile devices. An earphone connected to a USB microphone using a software (such as Skype) will output the analog audio signal, so no digital signal can be output. LINK is different, and it is a standard interface for optical drives. audio produced by the drive is digital audio (16-bit / 44.1 kHz), and so smartphones and a headset can be connected without any problems. Muma called me upstairs to the solar and said I was to have him as soon as I woke up. We needed to have a long talk, she explained, seeing that I still hadn't come to terms with being a Daybreak. Unfortunately, as my personal Hsst was given to me by Prince Maka, it was also my Prince's, something that I myself didn't think much of until recently. Though I was married, I wasn't actually Maka's Queen. I wasn't an Even, like the Queen-mother in the story my mother was reading. But that changed when I came up to the princess house and talked to Brora. "It's safe in there, though," she had told me, and as far as I was concerned that was good enough. Even during the daytime, the princess house was safe; the Una shield kept out nightwalkers and anyone with some kind of magic. Even so, many princesses snuck into the house for nighttime hideaways. Supposedly, you're not supposed to go outside during the night, although in my family that's just 'cause my mother didn't want to babysit. T'mee was the same. That was one reason why I didn't mind being up here, behind my parents' solar, up here away from the rest of the palace in case I needed to get out of the way while T'mee took care of whatever it was he had to take care of. It was with relief that I knew he was being quiet, not necessarily because he couldn't sing better, but because it was easier to put my head down, shut my eyes, and listen than to listen to him sing. I woke up from my nap in the solar to find Muma putting up the wall in my room to prevent Hsst from escaping. I wondered how long I had been asleep, but she immediately began asking me questions about everyone. How my father was doing? What was my mother doing? T'mee? N'hira? Black Rose? Muma? Was my brother well? "Ah, Hsst," she said. "It's time for you to get dressed, and follow me to the princess house." I nodded, already a little annoyed at the idea. "I'm going back to sleep," I told her. She frowned. "N'khalé," she said, using the Saraari title
