I am trying to write a macro that will allow me to: Open an existing presentation, and remove all slides (or, at least, hide all slide images from view) Then open an excel workbook Create a new slide Fill it with a list of all the slide images that I have in the presentation Export the finished presentation to the excel workbook I have some code that mostly works, but I am trying to clean it up, and move some things around to organize it better. Most of my code deals with PowerPoint to open the presentation and everything - much like this question here. My code right now is kind of a mess. I put a lot of my code for the Excel portion of my code in a class (essentially, a module) called "Office.XL" with a few public properties. I also have a standard module "PPT" with two public properties that handle PowerPoint. I want to try to keep everything under one namespace/directory structure, but I don't know if that's the best way to go about this. Here are the snippets of code I have that I really need some help cleaning up: 1) "PPT" module: Sub SlideShow(FileName As String) Dim myPPTApp As PowerPoint.Application Dim myPPTShape As PowerPoint.Slide Dim myPPTPres As PowerPoint.Presentation Const pptAppStatePreparingForPresentation = 16 Const pptAppStatePresentation = 6 Const pptAppStateClosing = 7 Set myPPTApp = CreateObject("PowerPoint.Application") Set myPPTPres = myPPTApp.Presentations.Open(FileName) 'switch to working directory Const pptGetPath As String = "C:\Users\james\Desktop\Working" 'open PowerPoint myPPTApp.Visible = True myPPTApp.Workbooks.Open(
