I tried this too and. myDiabloll and it doesn't run at all.The St. Louis police officers charged in the death of an unarmed black man last year will get $20 million in a wrongful death settlement, the St. Louis Metropolitan Police Department announced Thursday. The department won the case against the six officers who fatally shot 24-year-old Alton Sterling last July, along with a separate verdict against the officers who fired at Sterling's brother, who was hit in the chest and shoulder. The officers were charged with murder and civil rights violations. Four of them have pleaded not guilty. The other two officers pleaded guilty to lying on reports. The defendants were released after a probation period. The department said they were still on duty. They could not be reached for comment. The settlement means that at least one of the officers will not face criminal charges. However, the police department said they will be subject to the terms of their plea agreement, including paying the $20 million. The settlement is the largest in the city's history, eclipsing a $17 million payout for a 2005 officer involved shooting in which a state agent was charged with manslaughter and assault. The slaying of Sterling unfolded after police responded to a call about a scuffle outside a convenience store where a group of men were selling CDs. Sterling, who had a criminal record, and another man were selling CDs outside the store when police arrived. The other man was shot in the leg and went to a hospital. A witness, former NFL player Ahman Green, also was hit with a plastic Taser, and he suffered a broken arm. The officers fired at the group and killed Sterling, who was later found to have had a gun tucked in the right side of his waistband, according to investigators. The police department said Sterling was attacking one of the officers with a stick when he was shot. Retired St. Louis police officer Jimmie Roach said the officers showed "a complete lack of restraint in the shooting." He said that in 40 years of police work, he has never seen the use of Tasers, especially in the 1cdb3666d
