Police in Truro pulled over Sean Dunning, 43, on Highway 104, said Cpl. Steve Bartlett. He was sent to Truro police headquarters where he was interviewed. Bartlett said police will prepare a report of the circumstances of the incident and Dunning's release will be determined at a later date. "We don't consider him a danger to society at this time," Bartlett told reporters, and he added that Dunning wasn't charged. Dunning's lawyer, Paul Stinson, told the court Tuesday that he does not think Dunning's mental state is relevant to the case. Dunning's four-year-old son, who was also pulled over during the incident, wasn't injured. Dunning, a former Australian citizen, and his wife were charged after their son was found dead in their Nelson flat on Nov. 14. They had been missing for several weeks and were also the subjects of an Amber Alert for their son. The boy's body was discovered on the third day of their disappearance, after they were last seen on Nov. 9. His body was found in a suitcase that contained a blanket and a pair of shoes with a sock inside. Sean Dunning and his son at the time of their disappearance. Their bodies were discovered on Nov. 14. (CBC) They were arrested late on Nov. 14. A medical examiner told the court Tuesday that the cause of death is still undetermined, but that the child's body showed signs of being restrained by a cord or ligature. The Crown said it intends to call three medical experts to testify at trial, including a paediatric surgeon.
