Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a heater used for a vehicle engine, a refrigerator, or the like. 2. Description of the Related Art A heater for a vehicle engine or a refrigerator is driven by a motor in order to maintain the temperature of a cabin, a warming-up period, or the like, and a demand for the heater capable of downsizing the motor has been increased. As one of the vehicles' operational conditions where it is used, a compressor motor has the following disadvantages: the electric power consumption is large because the motor needs the rotational force for the compression operation and the motor is driven at high speed in order to increase the motor output. In order to solve the problems, a heater using an electric motor having a permanent magnet as the stator is proposed (see, for example, JP-A-5-133626). The electric motor using the permanent magnet as the stator has high efficiency because the stator is a non-rotating structure. In addition, there is a merit that the structure of a rotor coil can be simplified. As a result, the heater using the electric motor can efficiently increase the motor output because
