PageQ: ServiceStack.Text JSON serialization of type with private constructor I am using ServiceStack 3.9.54.0 to serialize C# objects to JSON. However, when I try to use a type with a private constructor it fails to serialize. I have a class with private constructors:

```
public class MyClass { private readonly int m_num = 123; public MyClass() { Console.WriteLine("{0} default constructor called", nameof(MyClass)); } public MyClass(string s) { Console.WriteLine("{0} string constructor called", nameof(MyClass)); } public MyClass(int num) { Console.WriteLine("{0} int constructor called", nameof(MyClass)); m_num = num; } }

This is the example serializer configuration:

public class MyObjectSerializer : JsonSerializer { public override void Serialize(TextWriter writer, MyClass value, JsonSerializerOptions options) { writer.WriteLine(value.GetType().Name); base.Serialize(writer, value, options); } }
```

I can successfully serialize MyClass instances with the above configuration, but I cannot serialize a class with a private constructor. I see the private constructor version of the class being serialized in the JSON, but the services.json is missing the MyClass instance. When the settings are corrected to allow serialization of the private constructor, I see the singleton MyClass instance. I am assuming it has to do with the instance being serialized, but I am not sure why or how to get around this. A
